

March 8, 2017

Word Count 226

Attention editors
and producers:

Cascade Commentaries are provided for reprint in newspapers and other publications, with credit given to author(s) and Cascade. Contact Cascade to arrange print or broadcast interviews on this commentary topic.

Please contact:

Cascade Policy Institute
4850 SW Scholls Ferry Rd.
Suite 103
Portland, Oregon 97225

Phone: (503) 242-0900
Fax: (503) 242-3822

www.cascadepolicy.org
info@cascadepolicy.org

4850 SW Scholls Ferry Road
Suite 103
Portland, Oregon 97225

t: 503.242.0900
f: 503.242.3822
info@cascadepolicy.org
www.cascadepolicy.org

QuickPoint! – The Road to Success Travels Through 3rd Grade Reading

By Kathryn Hickok

Denisha Merriweather failed third grade twice. Today, she is finishing her master's degree, thanks to Florida's tax-credit-funded scholarship program. Last week Denisha was President Trump's guest at his Address to Congress, where he called educational choice "the civil rights issue of our time."

The key to Denisha's success was her godmother's ability to remove Denisha from a school that was failing her, and to send her to the school that provided her with the support she needed.

Denisha says:

"Now that I'm in graduate school, I can look up statistics that suggest I've beaten the odds....[S]tudents who don't read proficiently by the third grade are four times as likely to drop out of high school as those who do...."

"That was me."

According to the National Association of Education Progress, only 34% of Oregon fourth-graders tested "proficient" in reading in 2015. Oregon students should have the power of choice to find their own path to success, just like Denisha. The Oregon Legislature can help them do this with Senate Bill 437. SB 437 would give parents who want to opt out of a public school a portion of the per-student state funding for their child, to spend on education in other ways. No one disputes the need for improvements to public schools. But children who need help today should be able to get help now.

Kathryn Hickok is Publications Director and Director of the Children's Scholarship Fund-Oregon program at Cascade Policy Institute, Oregon's free market public policy research organization.

